To the Copperleaf talent acquisition team,

I was excited to hear that BC Tech's Digital Lift Internship Program matched me to Copperleaf. I was impressed with Copperleaf's commitment to making sustainable and empowered asset management products, as well as your reputation for great management even as a large global organization.

I took the pandemic as an opportunity to transition into a new line of work. I taught myself how to code in HTML, CSS, and JavaScript, which was soon followed by attending BrainStation's UX Diploma program through BC's Reskilling Program to further enhance my skills. Prior to this, I was a strength coach and fitness leader. Now, after a year of hard work, I am now both a skilled coder and UX designer, having worked with individuals and teams focusing on researching meaningful human-centred solutions to their problems.

Though I am looking forward to all the skills and experience that I will gain from this co-op position, I am also excited to contribute my wheelhouse of skills to Copperleaf. I have a high aptitude to adapt and thrive while staying cool under stress, completing tasks with speed and accuracy. Additionally, I have the valuable ability to liaise between developers and designers due to my background in coding and UX while keeping the big picture in mind. I am also a dynamic public speaker, a strong communicator, team player, and leader with the ability to get along with virtually everybody.

I hope we can connect to talk about my possible future as an intern.

Sincerely,

Luay Alali
